Sylvia Acevedo is an engineer, rocket scientist, tech entrepreneur, and the CEO of Girl Scouts of the USA. She began her career at NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory, where she created algorithms and analyzed data from Voyager 2's spacecraft flyby of Jupiter and two of its moons, Io and Europa. She went on to work as an engineer and executive at Apple, Dell, Autodesk, and IBM. Sylvia was appointed CEO of Girl Scouts of the USA in 2017 after serving on the Board of Directors, coming full circle from her youth as a Girl Scout in Las Cruces, New Mexico, where she developed a passion for space and astronomy, then becoming one of the first Latina/o's to earn their Graduate Engineering Master's Degree from Stanford. Her bold initiatives as CEO have underscored the organization's commitment to serving all girls with cutting-edge, research-backed, and girl-centered programming that ensures the country's workforce pipeline is filled with true go-getters, innovators, risk-takers, and leaders—what Girl Scouts call G.I.R.L.s. Sylvia is the author of Path to the Stars: My Journey from Girl Scout to Rocket Scientist, a memoir that inspires middle school readers to live the life of their dreams.

YWCA also advocates fearlessly for institutional reform and systemic change. With over two decades of professional experience in policy, legal, and business sectors, Castillo has served in senior leadership for the Clinton and Obama Administrations as well various public, private and non-profit settings. With the Obama Administration, Castillo served as National Director of the Minority Business Development Agency (MBDA), becoming the first Latina to lead the agency, which secures financing and capital in excess of $19 billion and creating or retaining over 33,000 jobs.

Kase is leading the historic organization through a period of rapid transformation and growth focused on building power by engaging in advocacy, legislation, litigation and organizing efforts centered around issues of voting rights and democracy reform.

Prior to joining the League, she served as COO of CASA, a social justice and civil rights organization at the forefront of the immigrant rights movement representing nearly 100,000 members. Virginia's career started in her early 20's when she co-founded a youth-led non-profit in her hometown of Hartford, CT organizing current and former gang members and other at-risk youth and sought to provide them with a pathway out of a destructive lifestyle through leadership development and access to employment and educational opportunities. Raised by two incredible women, one white and one Puerto Rican, Kase is grateful to call both mother, one who gave her life and one who helped raise her, in the Hispanic community as her own, which inspired her to dedicate her life's work to fighting for social justice and civil rights. Virginia is a graduate of the University of Maryland and writes and speaks on issues impacting our democracy.
