“Our undocumented community comes from across the world – we’re Latino, Asian, Arab and Black. We’re queer, we’re trans, we’re straight. And with or without DACA, we will continue to fight to survive and thrive in this country we call home. We will do so because we descend from a lineage of fighters and survivors – and we are here to stay... As we fight for our rights as immigrants, let’s remember the sacrifices our parents made so that we could become paramedics, lawyers, artists, scientists, and teachers. Let’s also remind others that we contribute greatly to the cultural and economic growth of the country. And finally, let us be activists by calling our elected officials and mobilizing the community.” – DREAMERS, Inspira Award

"I want to dedicate this award to these people [in] peril that take their future into their hands, and go forth and look for a right that is undeniable to any human being, which is just to be better. And to be better means better in a community. ...to aim for the common good. This is a big shout out to all the Dreamers, all the people, all the young kids that... that are in this very critical situation because ... it is unlike it's ever been... There is an irrational mythology, an irrational fabricated idea that we are rapists, that we are criminals, drug traffickers... it's very difficult to counteract that irrational ideology with rational thought. What we have to do is to manifest ourselves in every shape and form. Absolutely. Not be afraid. Be empowered. Be contestatarians. Those little guys who are fighting for the right to stay here in this country... Really! Speak out. ...I want to talk on behalf of everyone in Mexico, to you guys is that no matter where you're from, no matter from where your parents came to the United States, or your grandparents, or your great-grandparents came to the United States, or why you came to the United States. It doesn't matter. We, as Mexicans, we have to offer you the possibility to feel that Mexico is your home, as well... The Ancients used to say, 'wherever you feel good, that is your home.' Well, I promise you that my intention is to make you feel good in Mexico ..and that you also consider that a home if you want to come visit, if you want to come live there. We need you. We need you more than ever." – Gael García Bernal, Vision Award (Sample Acceptance Remarks)

"I developed my love for STEM related disciplines at a very young age. I was fortunate to have two loving parents who told me I could be whatever I wanted. My dreams were big and I knew nothing could stop me if I worked hard, lived with INTEGRITY, HONESTY and used patience to get where I wanted to be. And that is exactly what I did... It is my hope that through my work I can continue to serve as an example and leader for YOUNG WOMEN and HISPANICS to dream big and to challenge the stereotypes surrounding jobs in STEM career fields. In closing, I want to echo once again how special thi
